

AUGUST

FOR THE REPUBLICAN.

Composed by JAS. A. SMITH, Member, N. C. H., 1861-1862.

Almighty God I adore thy throne,
A new-born nation stands,
Thy on thy parting grace above
Our prostrate hopes depend.

Dark clouds over a heavy land,
And shadowy power is high,
Yet mercy's hand is on our hand,
We still survive today.

How change of days is made divine,
For error, guilt and shame,
Impious numbers laid in chains,
Disgrace our happy land.

Oh turn them, turn them to thy love,
Convert them to thy love,
Then shall our hearts obey thy word,
And meet them there in peace.

Then shall our hearts obey thy word,
We will not sink in sin,
Secure by all-merciful God,
When God, our God is near.

We do cry unto thy heavenly throne,
The King of the Heavenly host,
To drive the vandals from our land,
Disperse them from our coast.

They have invaded our peaceful land,
To turn and plunder our homes,
But we trust great works from the hand,
Whence our help must come.

670 DID HE GAIN.

Who would not die, in Heaven to dwell,
His endless joys to share,
Who would not leave this dying world,
And enter death's dark door.

Who would not die, to live with Christ,
To see him face to face,
To gaze upon that glorious smile,
That lights that blessed face.

Who would not die, (O joyful thought)
That leads the broken heart,
To meet again the loved and lost,
Nor from them ever part.

Who would not die, to be free from sin,
From pain and sorrow free,
To have no more the meaning words,
Of "Gone with the Wind."

Who would not die, to welcome death,
If Christ be only mine,
For then I shall begin to live,
When I this world resign.

Who would not die, to be free from sin,
From pain and sorrow free,
To have no more the meaning words,
Of "Gone with the Wind."

ACROSTIC.

TO THE PUBLIC.

HAVING recovered my health to a considerable extent, and being now able to work, I shall in future, be present at my post, ready to attend to all calls, and fill all orders for work, executed in the neatest, most fashionable and durable manner.

All kinds of

FURNITURE!
SUCH AS BUREAUS,
WARDROBES,
TABLES,
SIDEBOARDS,
BOOK CASES,
AND THE REST OF
COTTAGE BED STEADS

Made on the best plan, mortised, tenanted and screwed together—you can't wear them out. I don't work on the plan of two-piece, joint and blocking, bedsteads now in vogue, in your country, and the money, and have them fixed. It is impossible for a man to pay cash for materials, and sell on a credit, unless he has plenty of capital, and if he had that, I guess he would not want to work. So my terms are cash for all work when delivered. My experience in business enables me to make the best bedsteads in use—proof against bed-bugs, so troublesome in this region.

All kinds of COFFINS made to order, and burials attended promptly—prices as low as those of any Cabinet maker who has served a regular apprenticeship at the business, and works at the trade as a living. I am not setting my prices by the men who work one month at one trade and another month at any other trade.

We beg leave to call the attention of our friends to

A kind father was present to smooth the rough and cheer up the dying boy—his soul he passed away gently as the soft breathing of an infant sleeper. In the cemetery at Richmond amid the honored galaxy of departed patriots lies his rest; that is consecrated soil parent. But it is the home of many martyrs until they shall all be called to the general camp. "Not made with hands eternal in the Heavens." His blood is another voice calling on God for retribution; and with Heaven's blessing, the blood of our martyrs shall secure a mighty host of warriors to accomplish the glorious work of national freedom. One more star has been added to the beautiful constellation of Southern Jewels. Peace to his memory. "There is not an hour of day or dreaming night that I was with thee; there is not a wind that whispers thy name, and not a flower that grows beneath the moon, but in its fragrance tells a tale of thee."

W. L. C.

DIED—July 26th 1862, at the residence of her father Mr. J. B. Prater, Mrs. Susan E. McCain, in the 35th year of her age.

The subject of this notice needs no extended eulogium to perpetuate her memory. Those who knew her best regarded her as among the excellent of the earth. She had been for a number of years an humble and consistent member of the Presbyterian Church. She adorned the doctrine of Christ, not by professions but by a meek and quiet spirit.

She was patient under sufferings submitting readily to her Heavenly Father's will.

She had been for several years in feeble health, but disease did not seem to begin its terrible ravages until a week before her death. Her end came much sooner than her friends anticipated, but she was found watching. Quietly she sank to rest. Her father, mother, brothers, sisters, and the children live to mourn the loss of her society, but she has entered into higher and holier fellowship, even that of God and the Lamb—May the Lord enable us all by his grace to meet her in Heaven.

Thou art gone to the grave, but I will weep to deplore thee.
When God was thy ransom, thy guardian and guide,
He gave thee, he took thee, and he will restore thee.
Wretched I was to stray, since the Savior has led.

A FRIEND

Died, at his father's residence in this county, on the 10th of July, 1862, T. H. HUGHES, son of John T. A. and Mary B. Hughes, in the 32d year of his age. He was keenly sensitive to all the duties and obligations resting upon him in the various relations of life. As a son he was obedient; as a brother, he was affectionate and attentive; as a friend, he was prompt and faithful; as a neighbor, he was true; as a tradesman, he was honest; as a husband he was devoted; as a father, he was provident and kind; and in the higher and more sacred character of Christian, he was earnest and sincere.

During his illness, which was of a complicated character, chronic diarrhea, contracted in the service of his country, and general debility. His sufferings, although ever increasing, were partially lessened by an unusual exhibition of Christian fortitude on his part, as well as by the deep sympathy and kind attentions of relations and friends for truly his every word and action was full of grace and promptly attended to. He was at the time of his death a citizen of Georgia, Ga. where he had resided for several years, and for some years previous to his death, he was an ardent member of the Methodist Church of that place. He has left a widow and infant son to mourn his early death. May his commend charge to his wife and infant child to the protection of Him who ever careth for us.

WHOLE NO. 1339.

HEAD QUARTERS,
2d CAMP OF INSTRUCTION FOR ALA.
Talladega, Alabama, 7th August '62.
GENERAL ORDERS
No. 1.

1. The undersigned having been assigned to the command of the 2d Camp of Instruction for Alabama assumes the duties thereof from and after date

2. As soon as the quartermaster's, subsistence, and medical departments can be organized, and the requisite supplies obtained, the camp will be opened for the reception of recruits collected from the more northern counties of the State of Alabama, under the Act to further provide for the Public Defense, commonly known as the "Description Act," limiting the enrolment of recruits will continue to perform the duty of enrollment, obedience to General Orders No. 30 of the War Department and General Orders No. 1, issued by Major Swanson, Commandant of the 1st Camp and senior officer charged with the enforcement of the Act in the State of Alabama. Recruits however will not be forwarded to this camp, until notice is given that it is open for their reception.

3. The commissioned enrolling officers, detailed for North Alabama, will report immediately to these Headquarters, the name of the sub-enrolling officers, appointed by them, for the various counties composing their respective dis-

4. The commanding officer regrets to observe in some quarters a disposition to bring reproach upon the recruits obtained under the operation of the Conscription Act. There is no discredit in being a so-called "Conscript." The laws of our country makes no distinction, in respect to merit, privilege, or position, between this and any other class of troops in the service. Many true and loyal men have been kept at home by urgent and imperious domestic reasons, awaiting the action of the government to assume the responsibility for deciding for them between the claims of conflicting duties. The spirit, that would brand these men with reproach, if encouraged, would rob the volunteer force of all its merit, by fendering it a moral necessity to create a copy.

By order of
Major W. T. WAITHELL.
A. A. G. Commanding 2d Camp of

A Scotch letter published in the Canadian papers gives the following in reference to the Prince of Wales:

"Should medication be called for after he has assumed the toga virilis, his Royal Highness will be required to act as thus inaugurating his public career as a friend of peace, an reconciler of men—in which he will be assisted by older and more experienced heads than his own."

25 The Chicago Tribune has seven columns and a half of absentees from the officers' regiments alone. The whole number is estimated at three thousand—about equal to three full regiments.

KEEN REVENGE.—While Yankee officers captured by the Government at Winchester, Va., were being taken to the rear, they were surrounded by a large force of Confederate soldiers, who killed them all.

for they were passing Post Oak Springs, a lady of that Village, at whom they stared rather impudently, sarcastically remarked that they were a good looking set of Yankées. "Yes ma'am, responded one of the captured officers. "and we all, wish to marry; well sir rejoined the lady, "when you have subjugated the South or sailing in that emigrant to Liberia, I will guarantee each of you a robust woolly headed negro wife." The officer almost choked, but had nothing more to say. —Rex.

A Noble Extortion.—The Missippian, in an article upon "extortion," says:

We understand in the neighboring town of Union the merchants have met and agreed upon the measure of not doing business with any one who has been guilty of extortion.

The Present Condition and Probable
Continuance of the War.

If the North is satisfied with the present position of affairs, the South ought surely to be. There has been one continued and unbroken series of Confederate victories since the taking of New Orleans. The brutalities of Butler have furnished the Confederate soldiers with a war cry—"Butler!" "Butler!" which has been almost as invincible as that of "The sword of the Lord and of Gideon." And although, in revenge for their defeat, the Yankee Generals have resorted to cowardly measures of retaliation on peaceful citizens, women and children, and Lincoln in his impotent rage has called for six hundred thousand men, and is arming regiments of free blacks in the North all the more resolute and in their fury committing outrages unheard of before, either in savage or civilized warfare, and living like a ruined gambler, is desperately venturing all on his last dollar, and as for their regiments of free blacks, if they bring them down here, we will soon find better employment for them on the cotton and sugar plantations.

Aside from the increasingly strong indications of foreign recognition and intervention, we refer the reader in support of the opinion that the war will close this fall, to the following facts of the growing dissensions at the North—the riots between black and white, the numerous peace meetings at the capital of Indiana and other places—the forced resort to a draft, which is creating a deep feeling of dissatisfaction, and causing thousands to leave the country for Canada, and the nations—the depreciation of Northern currency—the rapidly widening gulf between the Abolition and Democratic parties, and other signs, all tending to prove that the whole of the Northern government must soon be utterly disorganized in their hopeless undertaking of subjugating the South. But should all these obstacles be partially overcome, and the war against us be prolonged solely for revenge and plunder, we hope our Congress and Cabinet may soon authorize the invasion of their country, the arrest of their citizens to be kept as hostages for arms, and the destruction or taking every species of property, one half to go to the captors and the other to remunerate the loss of property stolen by the Yankees. They have a densely populated country full of railroads, large cities and wealthy manufacturing establishments. If they force us to a self defense this sort of a war of plunder and extermination, which they seem determined to do, we can beat them—man to man and in doing so will be fully and honorably justified in the eyes of the civilized world.

22 We invite the particular attention of the afflicted to the card of Dr. J. A. Cropper, in another column, who will visit this place about the first of September and remain a few days only. Persons afflicted with the very painful and difficult diseases mentioned by him, ought by all means to avail themselves of his valuable services. Dr. Cropper has devoted a number of years of intense study and practice to this particular branch of his profession, and as a natural consequence has become very efficient, from the concentration of his mind and energies. From a pamphlet copy of testimonials, as well as other sources of information, we do not entertain a doubt that he has been preeminently successful.

23 We have been shown a very handsome and durable hat, manufactured by N. W. Wynn, of this place, out of broadcloth and canvas, with some light felt for lining. Such a hat is much more handsome and durable than the Yankee hats made of pasteboard and a little canvas or silk lined on the outside, which have been imposed upon us for many years past at high prices. Similar hats are now being manufactured by a number of hat makers in the place, and when testing one of them, we could but wonder that they had not been made many years ago, solely from motives of economy. Even when this revolution ends, they will be proudly worn as monuments of the patriotism, integrity, and industry southern of bodies.

24 Capt. D. G. Earle, of the "Tom Walker Dragoons," passed through our place on Sunday last for the direction of Montgomery. He made a very brief stay and we had but a very short conversation with him. We understand that his object was to obtain a piece of cannon for his company, in order to do more efficient work in his Partisan warfare against the Yankees along the railroads. Our readers will find from the extract we give from the Montgomery Advertiser, that his company has recently done noble work, and we predict they will continue to do so, unless the Yankees are too cunning or too nimble of foot to let them get within striking distance.

25 Dr. J. R. Starnes, who left this place some time since for Cuba, Miss. and who while there and at Tampa, was assigned to the duties of Surgeon of the 24 Tenn. Regt., has been in our place for several days. He will leave soon for Chattanooga, where he will be engaged as Surgeon of an Artillery Brigade. Wherever duty may be assigned him, we venture he will be distinguished for his competence, efficiency and skill as a surgeon.

26 Capt. S. D. McCall, of the 1st Ala. Cavalry Guards, was in our place on Monday last, and we think will remain in the country on full pay until the first of October. He has suffered a great deal from ill health since he left, but we understand the health of his company has recently very much improved.

27 We had the pleasure of meeting Gen. Geo. H. Thomas, of the 6th Tenn. Cavalry, who came to our place on Saturday evening, but on a short business. We understand his regt. will be attached to the 1st Ala. Cavalry, and probably go west, where they will have an opportunity for their native cavalry to much display, and for which they are well adapted.

28 We understand that Gen. Wm. M. Hamer, who left this place as a Lieut. of the Callum Guards, but who is now in command of the Hanes Cavalry, ordered to Oxford on Saturday night last, when his company is now engaged.

29 Staff. Maj. R. C. Wynn, who is appointed by the Federal Judge, Agent to procure arms for this country has returned, having been successful in his mission. He says the population is very much inclined to make further engagements, and the only chance was to buy from our friends. We have no more chance than for our people to form companies and make salt for themselves, or their at the Clark county or Virginia works.

30 We have been from 11 to 12 miles, from the 1st Ala. Regt., with the following list of killed and wounded in his company, from this county, in the recent battle of the 1st of August, near Culpeper, Va. In which Stonewall Jackson gained a complete victory over Pope. Capt. Lee says his company fought like heroes, not a man flinching, notwithstanding the rest was exposed to a destructive cross fire by the enemy firing on their left.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 11, 1862.
Mr. J. F. Gault—Dear Sir:—The 24th Ala. Regt. passed through here this morning, en route to join Stonewall Jackson's army at Gordonsville, under command of its gallant Lt. Col. Canby.

The regiment was a little over four hundred strong in camp, but as some sixty or seventy sick and feeble had to be left behind, it numbered only some three hundred and thirty or forty for duty. It is part of Wilson's Brigade, which is made up of the 5th, 16th, 19th and 21st Alabama Regiments—on the whole, though it had no trumpeter, it did a great deal of the hardest fighting there was done in the late battles of Manassas and Richmond. Each of the regiments has distinguished itself in some campaign. It is told that when a certain powerful battery was to be taken, and another General declined the job, as too great a task, Wilson said to him: "Just get on the way it is. I have some little Alabama regiments here, that will soon be sent away to fight over the enemy's works. No man is claimed to be a coward here."

Wilson's Brigade, they said, fought with great valor and skill in the battle of Manassas, and was greatly to be desired for its good discipline and steady fighting. Col. Canby has written me that "in a little since coming into camp, and with excellent effect. Several of our boys, as they marched, or after they had, and allowed to do so. They had traveled two miles from the city, and some of them were up. When they halted they were soon surrounded by the Yankees and the soldiers, from either side of their horses, on their heads, and could not with some little difficulty and pains picked up on the streets, or soft around by various Yankees who gathered about them."

Col. Canby was leading well, and had a handsome band of music. The band of the 24th Ala. Regt. is a fine one, and we heard a good account of the soldiers in the new regiments that were sent.

I conversed with many of the regt., especially Lt. Francis, commanding Co. "C," and Capt. Logan, and Lt. Black, commanding companies "D," "E" and "F," from Callum county. They each have a few sick in camp, but none dangerous. These officers were in good health, as were Lt. Cobb, Tom Grant, George Tarnley, Tom Walker, Horace Green, Jake Carpenter, James Green, William Woodley, Jesse Harris and many others that I would gladly mention if I had the time and space.

They all seemed in fine spirits, and gratified at the prospect of meeting the enemy again. Nothing pleases a true soldier so much as a prospect of active service. Like a warrior, the soldiers are all "all right" and "home's call" for the day. You may well be proud of your sons, husband and brother-in-law, if you will only the 16th the good name it has earned in such great service.

I trust these sick and wounded on a horse sent home on furlough, will be kindly sent and cured for, until they are able to join their companies.

I found the regiment quite an interesting one, and may rely on my telegraphing home the first reliable news I can obtain. The officers of the Callum county companies are prompt to send me their casualties as soon as possible. The full list opened as you will have learned, between Old Stonewall and Pope at Richmond, and will soon be in the hands of the public.

Wilson's Brigade, they said, fought with great valor and skill in the battle of Manassas, and was greatly to be desired for its good discipline and steady fighting. Col. Canby has written me that "in a little since coming into camp, and with excellent effect. Several of our boys, as they marched, or after they had, and allowed to do so. They had traveled two miles from the city, and some of them were up. When they halted they were soon surrounded by the Yankees and the soldiers, from either side of their horses, on their heads, and could not with some little difficulty and pains picked up on the streets, or soft around by various Yankees who gathered about them."

We have been anxiously looking for C. J. W. H. But y. in the exchange of prisoners, but he has not arrived. Gen. Wilson told me this morning, that he had heard from him a few days ago, and that he was still suffering with his wound and had been removed from Fort Monroe, to some more healthy place to rest for a while. I trust he will be able to come over before long.

Good bye. Take care of our wives and little ones, and we'll do the best we can for you all up here.

Yours truly,
C. J. CLARK.

the press, it seems, has taken no pains of late to throw the shadow of a doubt over important army movements in the West. The fact has been published, and there is no inappropriateness in repeating it, that Gen. Buell's forces at Tupelo have been subdivided into two corps, the one called the "Army of the Mississippi," and the other the "Army of the West." The former, as you know, has moved East, and the latter still remains at Tupelo under the exclusive command of the invincible Price.

We still receive daily accounts of the most hideous outrages committed upon the true people of Arkansas by the brutal soldiery of the Yankees, who now occupy Helena. A half a dozen instances are named in which the wives of absent soldiers have been subjected by bestial brutes to the shocking fate forced upon the wives of the brave. Placations around Helena are described as if by a tornado of living fire, and the families of the soldiers and families of the soldiers are described as if by a tornado of living fire, and the families of the soldiers are described as if by a tornado of living fire.

Three thousand bales of cotton, which had just passed into Yankee hands, were burned at the latter place, and a large quantity of other goods. The burning of cotton bales is now made the special business of some of the Yankees, and a large number of these adventurers are now peeping through from here in the hope of catching the booty of their comrades in arms referred to by the late Major General Van Dora.

OBITUARY.

Our two sons dead; Yes those good, noble, brave patriotic young men have fallen a prey to disease, while they were actively engaged in perpetuating the glory and future dignity of this Confederacy. But though their hopes are cut off, yet they are victors, and will remain thus as long as Zion's towers shall bear the name Eternal. The Lord is there.

And although I consider their names with others of their fallen Countrymen worthy a prominent place on the tablet of memory, and the grateful affection of a nation, yet I shall say but little of them here, as I intend to connect their history with my own, which will be published at some future time; for no knowledge is more indispensable than history guided by sound sense; then let us have the history of those who have fallen a sacrifice during the wide warring chaos of our Country's struggles.

JAMES P. R. BRANDON, was born Dec. the 10th 1834; and HENRY A. H. BRANDON, was born Feb. the 5th, 1838. Very soon the baptismal waters were poured upon their infant heads, and their childhood years had fully past the baptismal fire of the Holy Ghost was lapped upon their hearts, and as a result of the unity between God and man, they stood forth as pillars in his holy temple, to the day of their death.

James was a member of the Alabama

Conference; and as one thoroughly furnished for every good work, he filled the various appointments assigned him, until August, 1861, at which time he left the Ashville Circuit and came home and enrolled his brothers in Company H. 10th Alabama Regiment. There they continued until the 26th of last May, when James with his soul plumed for a heavenly flight having laid by his armor at the hospital at Lauderdale Springs, went forth with these, his last words.

"My way is clear. Walk in the narrow way, it is a bright way. O that the world could see it, and would walk in it."

In the last week of July, James received a discharge and started home but being too sick to travel, he stopped at Gainesville Hospital, where in three or four days death released his towering soul from the suffering body.

We have received a letter from a gentleman, who with the ministering angels witnessed his death, and who says he has seen hundreds die but never before witnessed such a death. It was as peaceful as an infant sleeping upon its mother's bosom. God even our God had ever been the light of his eye and the centre of his love; and holding fast the Eternal word he confessed no other savior; and though death by its stern grasp has rent the soul from its kindred body, yet thank God it cannot touch the consecrated bond that linked them to God, in Christ.

They walked together like the two brothers, and now I gaze on shining gates is open to them, and bending angels listen to their songs as they exclaim, "Hallelujah! The Lord God Omnipotent reigns! And though our lamentations for them will ever remain a response to that echo that has endured from Rama for more than eight hundred years, yet we too will join the song. The Lord God Omnipotent reigns."

Next winter their remains will be brought home and interred near our dear Josephine, where their names will be sanctified by the rites of the Church, witnessed by holy angels, they stand like a wall of fire to guard their sleeping dust, while a bright sword throned above bearing the sign of the Holy Trinity is acknowledged by all in Heaven, all on earth.

THEIR MOTHER.

KILLED.—On the 27th June 1862, on the battlefield of Vicksburg, aged 20 years. The deceased was a member of company "H," 10th Ala. Regt. and fell while charging the enemy's fortifications near Grant's Mills, where so many brave sons of the South found their life-boat for freedom's cause. He acted most gallantly on the field, pressing towards the foe while the missiles of death were falling thick and fast around him. He died on the field, too soon alas to hear the shouts of victory by his comrades in arms.

The deceased lost his mother in Calhoun county, while he was of tender years, and though he had kind friends and relations who took a deep interest in his welfare, still in his youth he was deprived of the true affection of a mother. He desired greatly to go to the war and share in its conflicts, and there to come from the State of Florida, where his father now resides and go with his acquaintances from Calhoun county. He is now numbered with the dead. Quietly but valiantly he rests upon the battlefield by the side of the gallant dead. He rests upon the ground, from which the enemy most ingloriously fled, to save his shattered columns—the rests upon a spot which will be ever dear to Southern hearts, and never to fade from the recollection of Southern minds—alas! how desolate and lonely his resting place, made solemn by the fall of so many in the Southern army. No need of tablets of stone, to remember his grave—the spot on the banks of the Chickasaw, will be made immortal by the pen of the historian.

MORGAN.

The following document sent to us by our attentive Knoxville correspondent reads as if Morgan was about to start again on the war path. Heaven prosper him in all his efforts to disenfranchise Kentucky:

HEADQUARTERS MORGAN'S CAVALRY }
Knoxville, Aug. 4, 1862.

General Order.

Soldiers: Your country make a fresh appeal to your patriotism and courage! It has been decided must be freed from the detested Yankee yoke, and who so fit to carry out this order as yourselves?

The road is well known to you! You have already taught the traitors at Tomkinsville, Lebanon and Cynthiana that where Southern hearts nerve Southern arms, our soldiers are invincible.

To an enemy be as tigers—to our Southern brethren be as lambs! Protect their homes, respect their property!

Is it not that of your fathers, mothers, sisters and friends?

Soldiers: I feel assured that you will return with fresh laurels to enjoy in peace the fruits of your glorious victories! In the meantime let your avenging cry be "Butcher! but shout—Kentucky! to your kindred and friends."

A stout built red bay horse, purely black on the way from Elm Mountain to Jacksonville, the figure of said horse will please consider him to be a handsome, with bill of clarks, if any, to meet Chattanooga, from which place I will mail the amount or take care of him till I have the opportunity of sending for him.

I am authorized by the Secretary of War, to raise a company of Partisan Cavalry.

All able-bodied young men who desire to save themselves from Conscription, now have the opportunity of giving me their names. No person named as conscript can be received in the company.

The company stands on the same footing as to pay, bounty and insurance as other companies.

Each recruit must use his best effort to have a good horse, gun and accoutrements.

Comments of the Press of Europe.

The London Herald speaking of the Yankee defeat before Richmond says:
"Poor McClellan. Who can venture to take a hopeful view of his position? To move on Richmond along the left bank of the James River, under cover of the gunboats, is impossible for the gunboats cannot pass Fort Darling. Extrication by transports to Fortress Monroe is still possible; but what an inglorious end to a campaign which was to achieve so much! Nor is Virginia alone in its discouragement to the Federal cause. In the West, where so many Federal lives have been sacrificed to disease and fighting, the Confederates are sure to close in on the retreat of Halleck, and to restore to the Confederacy the whole country of the lower Mississippi. At every point the North is beaten."

The London Times, thinks that McClellan's defeat changes everything, and adds:
"A fortnight before, a vast and well provided force was investing the capital city of the South, defended, as it was thought by only a few starving regiments. All was joy and ignorant confidence. Now the truth is revealed. The Northerners are receiving the conviction that such a people as the Confederates can never be subjugated. When they reflect that they have undertaken not only to defeat the armies of Lee and Beauregard, but utterly to destroy them, to occupy the whole Southern territory and garrison it year after year with a standing army of at least a quarter of a million of men, it may well be imagined that they are cooled and sobered by the prospect. * * * But there is enough to show that multitudes of the Northern people are becoming weary of this purposeless slaughter."

McClellan's address to his army after its defeat and retreat to the James river is published and ridiculed by all the papers of Europe—especially that sentence of it in which he says that it will always be source of pride to his soldiers to know they belonged to the army of the Potomac. The London Times charges McClellan with outright lying in his address. The Paris Patrie, calls it a parody on Napoleon, and says:
"We can understand the illusions and the exaggerations whose aim is to sustain the morale of the soldier, but to travestie the truth in this way, and present six successive and bloody defeats as a series of victories contributing to operate a combined advance movement, is to push a little too far the right of not avowing that one is beaten."

The Patrie thinks the subjugation of the South impossible, and says the only result thus far obtained is:
Their cities burned, immense quantities of merchandise lost, fields and harvests laid waste, pillaged, ruined; blood flowing in torrents, commerce annihilated, production and consumption stopped, private fortunes compromised, and for the Government of the North, a debt almost equal to that of England. Such are results obtained within a year."

The News of the battles before Richmond had revived the stories and rumors in Europe of mediation.
The French papers insist on construing the late debate in the English Parliament, and Lord Palmerston's speech against mediation in America, as meaning that the Ministry is paying the subject attention with a view to a mediation, while the liberal Journals, on the contrary, construe it to mean that the time has not yet come for such a movement; that they will watch for it, and when it does arrive will avail themselves of it.
The Constitutional is to commence a series of leading articles from the principal editor, in favor of mediation, based on the late discussion in the English Parliament.
A London correspondent says that the Emperor of Russia has made a personal appeal to President Lincoln to a compromise with the South. Baron Brunow has communicated this to the British Cabinet, and also to the Emperor of France. This correspondent adds:
"If the Government at Washington refuse to listen to the proposition of the Czar, then England and France will interfere in behalf of peace. Friendly mediation will be first proposed; if refused, recognition of the South and intervention or breaking of the blockade will follow."

Mediation is also strongly urged by the increasing distress caused by the "cotton famine," which is now stirring Parliament and all England. A million of people are starving for want of the raw material of which the war deprives them, and for want of the Southern market for manufactured goods now sealed by the blockade. This agony cannot be much longer endured neither in England nor France.

Major-General John Pope.

The writer of this has known Pope for the last twenty years, and known him to be one of the most vulgar, coarse, obscene and fictitious glibbons on the face of the earth. An admitted coward; the grossest of debauchees, and the most reckless spendthrift of borrower on money, the most notorious of liars, the most inflated of braggarts, is now playing the tyrant on the soil of Virginia. This only proves what the world has long known, that tyranny is ever associated with cowardice and debauchery.

Proclamation Pope, in the winter of 1845, addressed a Miss Mary G., in Savannah, Ga. in the belief that she would inherit the property of her aunt, Mrs. T. He asked for the hand of Miss G., and when interrogated as to his prospects in life, she replied that he was the son of a man of fortune, but that in addition to his share of the parental estate, he owned a "sugar plantation" in Louisiana. Our hero listening, however, that Miss G. would not be an heiress, became exceedingly desirous to break off the engagement. He therefore wrote her an insulting letter asking to be released from the engagement. The letter she gave to her father, who had received it about the same time from Pope's father, saying that he was poor and hisson penniless, and he regretted to add, thoroughly unprincipled, that Miss G. took the two letters with him to the barracks where, the gallant lieutenant, was quartered. He called in witnesses to the interview between himself and Pope, and denounced him as a villain, a cheat and impostor. Pope sprang up to strike him, but the stern eye and athletic frame of the old man frightened him. He sat down, saying, "your age protects you." "Oh, never mind my age," replied Mr. G.—"Another torrent of abuse from the old man, and once more Pope rose with clenched fists, but sat down again saying, "your religion protects you." "Oh never mind my religion," said Mr. G., "strike ahead, but no blow was struck, and Pope took the box for the North that night, in debt a thousand dollars for borrowed money—a debt which has not been paid to this hour.

As a proof of the utter want of principle of this poor wretch, it need only be mentioned that he had been detailed in company with Lieutenant (now Brig. Gen.) M. L. Smith, to draw maps of coast survey, but did not work one hour during the six months of their sojourn in Savannah.
Surgeon Cuyler of the Federal army, and hundreds of officers in that service, as well as in the Confederate, are perfectly well acquainted with these facts.

Proclamation Pope is one of the most bestial of men. Every officer of the old army knows of his enormous licentiousness, and of his half breeds in New Mexico.
Petersburg Express.

From the Charleston Courier.
Promotion from the Ranks.

In one of the many memoirs of the first Napoleon, we are told of an incident connected with the taking of the bridge of Lodi. The veterans of the camp desired to show their admiration for their young General by electing him Corporal. There was some doubt among them how the rigid disciplinarian would receive such a "liberty." Napoleon with that quick instinct which characterizes the man of genius, saw at once the moral effect of accepting the "honor." That evening he sent for the different officers and desired the name of some private in the ranks whose conspicuous bravery, combined with general good conduct and soldierly bearing, made him a proper object for distinction. A name was given him. Napoleon ordered his Captain to see that the said private should be made a Corporal forthwith. The next day the new Corporal appeared on dress parade, clad of course at his unexpected promotion—but new honors were in store for him. In the presence of the whole army, Napoleon ordered the new Corporal to appear before him.
"Comrade," said he, "I've learned with satisfaction that you discharge well all the duties of a soldier. Brave of course you are—all Frenchmen are brave. Our comrades have promoted you to the rank of Corporal. I now promote you to the dignity and rank of General." The bond of sympathy between the great warrior and his men was cemented from that day.

Now Messrs. Editors, it is a most singular and significant circumstance that there has not been, during this war, a single case of promotion from the ranks for general soldierly conduct, combined with conspicuous gallantry in the field. And yet the personnel of the Southern army surpasses that of any army ever known.
After the battle of Manassas, I expected every day to hear that the commander-in-chief of our armies, our noble President, had promoted from the ranks those Southern men whose conspicuous gallantry, combined with general good conduct, deserved notice and reward. I was disappointed.

I have been led to these reflections from reading a semi-official editorial in the Richmond Enquirer in regard to the conspicuous gallantry of Lieut. Brown of the Arkansas.
The article in question proposes to close the door of routine, and fasten it down forever with red tape, upon advancement by merit and bravery. I beg, sir to offer my public protest against this doctrine. There should be but one road to honor either in our army or navy, and that road should alone open to the sword and merit. Let rank be attained only by Executive appointment, and advancement by routine, and you will fasten on the Southern army one of two things—the spirit of menialage, or the spirit of insubordination. The best way of testifying the appreciation of our people for the gallant conduct displayed upon the Morriame and the Arkansas, is by promotion, from the commanding officer down to the gunners! The same rule applies, with even greater force, to the army. From the ranks of our gallant troops should come the honored heroes of the nation.

Yankee atrocities in Western Virginia—The most infamous Cruelties and Murder of a Child.

The Central Presbyterian has the following statement of some of the atrocities committed by the Yankees in Western Virginia:
Mr. Lewis Jones, of Nicholas, had been forced to fly from his home simply because his sympathies were with his native State. He loved Virginia, and therefore the Yankees hated him. Mrs. Jones was left in charge of a little son, Foster by name, 12 or 13 years of age. Failing to secure the father, the wrath of the Northern scoundrels turned against the child. Marshall Dorsey, a Union traitor, helped them in their bloody work. Mrs. Jones was poor, and the little boy tried to aid his mother in obtaining an honest living. A lady who knew little Foster Jones well, tells me that he was amiable, gentle and inoffensive. But the father had escaped, and the traitor Dorsey helped the Yankees to a victim in the person of this child. They took the little boy away from his mother, and in full hearing of her cries, wrapped the blanket around his head, made it fast to a tree, and then shot the child with nine bullets. They then gathered around the body, like devils incarnate, and pierced it with bullets. The soldiers then came back to the village and and boasted of their infamy in the presence of Yankee officers and met with not a syllable of reproof.

ANTI-ROUTINE.

Louis Napoleon's Plan of Intervention.

The Berlin correspondent of the New York Herald, under date of 16th ult. after referring to the effect produced by the defeat of McClellan says:
This disastrous episode has revived the schemes of mediation, which had only been adjourned for a time, but by no means laid aside altogether. It seems that Louis Napoleon has hit upon a new plan. Instead of interfering by himself or in conjunction with England, he is trying to persuade all the chief Powers of Russia, Prussia, Austria, Spain, Italy, Sweden—to unite with him in the work of pacification for which he is so humanely anxious. The modus operandi would be for them to sign a collective note—a sort of round robin—addressed to the Cabinet at Washington, representing the horrors of a war carried on in the bosom of a people allied by race language and religion; the impossibility of either party subduing the other, and the necessity of a including peace, to their own interest and in that of Europe which is suffering from their contest almost as much as the belligerents themselves. It is thought that so imposing a demonstration would not be slighted by the government of President Lincoln and that perhaps, after some hesitation he would ultimately consent to enter into negotiations for the final separation of the South on such conditions as might be suggested by the mediating Powers. If, on the other hand, their proposals were rejected, they would at once proceed to acknowledge the independence of the Southern Confederacy, and initiate diplomatic relations with its government.
It is not unlikely that this project, recommended as it is by Louis Napoleon and Lord Palmerston, will find favor in the eyes of several of the continental Powers; but reflection will, I should imagine, induce them to pause before acceding to it.

Call for Six Hundred Thousand men
A Draft to be immediately made.

The North has at last settled the question of immediate drafting, and the Secretary of War has issued an order for six hundred thousand more men "to crush the rebellion"—three hundred thousand to be raised under the recent call of Lincoln and three hundred thousand more by a draft of the militia.
This action of the Government at Washington had created the wildest excitement in the North, and the war feeling had greatly subsided in its enthusiasm. The opposition to the order was not to be disguised.—The following extract from the New York Herald shows with what dissatisfaction it was received by the people of the city:
"The citizens of New York have taken the matter with quite an excited feeling, and when the fact became generally known around town yesterday evening everybody seemed to have received a sudden shock.—In consequence the office of County clerk, was during the whole of yesterday, crowded to a perfect jam by persons anxious to ascertain whether their names were on his books, and also to file exemption papers where it was conclusive that physical defects prevented them from shouldering a musket. There must have certainly some five thousand persons visited the office yesterday."

A good story is "told" of Captain Atkins, of Wheat's celebrated battalion. Atkins, who is well known as "Wald Irishman," being six feet two inches high, and of the Charles O'Malley school, was formerly of the British Legion in the army of Italy, where meeting with Col. Wheat, he became so much attached to him that he afterwards came over to this country to join him. It was Capt. Atkins who at the battle of Manassas led Wheat's battalion after the noble Wheat fell wounded, leading the celebrated charge of the Louisiana Tigers with a bare shillelagh. In the late battle in which the glorious Wheat fell, Atkins says, on calling the roll of his company the next morning, but one man answered to his name! "Shure" says Atkins, (for thus the story was told to me), "that was a sorry report! Devil a man left, save meself and the one! However I immediately proceeded to an election of officers, and the only solitary individual in the ranks was unanimously elected first Lieutenant. The next day, General Dick Taylor, a chip of 'Old Zack,' sez he to me: 'Atkins me boy, I noticed yez yesterday, yer men did splendidly! Din't they sez I. 'They did sez he, and deserve promotion.' Well then, sez I, 'ye've got it, for every mother's son of 'em have been put on Col. Wheat's staff in Heaven, and the only man left was unanimously elected a Lieutenant this morning.' 'Well that the General orders me to Richmond to fill up me company with conscripts; so, calling me Lieutenant, I gave him strict orders as to the discipline to be observed in me absence, and left him in charge of the company until me return.'—Charleston Courier.

Jackson did it.

It is very easy, now that the affair is over, to perceive the cause of McClellan's recent reverses. At the last moment, when least expected, and equally to the surprise, we have no doubt, of President Lincoln, Secretary Stanton, and General McClellan himself, Stonewall Jackson rushed from the Valley of the Shenandoah, attacked with 50,000 men our right wing of 20,000, forced it back and got in our rear of our whole army, with out weakening the rebel force massed in front of it by a single man. No General on earth could make head against such a coup de guerre. If McClellan had stood his ground and fought in such a position, nothing in the world could have prevented the utter annihilation of the Potomac army. That he saved the army against such odds and under such circumstances, and that he had been able to place it upon a new base of operations from which he may renew his attack upon the rebel capital with increased chances of success, affords such proof of consummate generalship as few living soldiers can show.—N. Y. Times July 28th.

The London times, in commenting on the Confiscation Bill, says: "Happily it is certain that no ruler will ever dare to put in force this scandalous law. It will only remain a monument of infamy to those who passed it, and be ranked hereafter with the attempted destruction of Charleston Harbor and the savage vagaries of Gen. Butler."

The English journals continue to discuss the American question and the London Times points out the Union prospects as more gloomy.
The Bishop of Oxford has recommended prayer to be read in his Diocese for peace in America.

POETRY.

Let us help one another.
Let us all help one another,
And a heart of kindness show;
As down time's flowing river,
In the boat of life we row.
For though rough may be the weather,
And the sky be overcast;
If we only pull together,
We can brave the storm at last.

Let us help one another,
In misfortune's wintry day,
And be kinder still, as ever,
Earth's best gifts are snatched away
When bright fortune gilds the morn;
Hollow hearts will flake and cling;
But when comes the night of sorrow,
Only true hearts comfort bring.

Let us all help one another,
And do good wherever we can;
Who withholds the hand of kindness,
Source deserves the name of man:
For the great law of nature,
Which was meant mankind to bless,
Holds us help a fellow creature,
When we find him in distress.

THOUGHTS OF HOME.

O could I say "I'm home to-night!"
What rapture it would bring
Upon my young and ardent heart,
Where pure affections spring.

I'd clasp my age father's hand
Upon my throbbing breast;
For soon I know he leaves this vale
For an eternal rest.

My mother's form I would caress
In earnestness and love,
And think of all the joyous songs
She taught me by the grove.

My sister, too, with whom I've played,
And to-day cherish here;
I'd soothe the sorrows of her heart
And chuck a silent tear.

I'd greet my mother's noble form
Upon this earth once more;
But, ah! perhaps we never shall meet,
Till on yonder distant shore.

But soon, I trust, if life be spared,
I'd meet with those at home,
Beside the winding healthful stream,
Where I have loved to roam.

"The Lord hath borrowed it."

Rest for the little sleeper,
For the ransomed soul;
Peace for the lonely weeper,
Dark through waters roll!

Weep for the little sleeper,
Weep! it will ease thy heart;
Though the dull pain be deeper,
Than with the world to part.

Hath the dear Saviour found him?
Laid him upon His breast?
Folded His arms around him?
Kissed him to endless rest?

Grieve not with hopeless sorrow,
Jeans has felt your pain;
He did the lamb that borrow,
He'll bring him back again!

GEN. HINDMAN'S PROCLAMATION.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 21, 1862.
To the People of Arkansas:
The Yankee General Curtis is attempting to escape, his position is untenable; he is appalled by the disaster that has befallen him; he resorts to the desperate expedient of moving to the South along White River, trusting for supplies from Mississippi by boat.
The supplies cannot ascend White River. We have already blown up one of his ironclad boats, crippled another, and held the river against his fleet. The question now is shall army reach the fleet before you prevent him? The power is in your hands. The plan is not secret. I proclaim it to you all. It is not carried out the responsibility will rest on you. Take your gun in your hand, and ammunition. Every man of you mount your horse or go about. Do not wait an hour, lose no time in holding meetings. Move to the enemy by the shortest road. Join the first company that overtakes you on the march. Press upon the invaders from every direction. Attack him day and night. Kill his scouts and pickets. Kill his pilots and troops on the transport. Cut off his wagons, trains. Lie in ambush mounted officers. Destroy every point of meat and flour every ear of corn and stack of fodder, oats and wheat that can fall into his hands. Set trees as thick as in raffa on all the roads before him; burn every thing and block up the fords; hang upon his front, flanks and rear, and make the ring of a pair of rifles and shot guns the accompaniment of every foot of his retreat; and let every man feel and know that this appeal is addressed to him specially, and that it is the appeal of a bleeding country to her sons for deliverance.
Our army in the field will do its part. Will you do yours?
[Signed] T. C. HINDMAN,
Major-General.

CONN.—We learn that several large planters in Southwest Georgia have sold their growing crop of corn, to be delivered at the nearest railroad depot when gathered, at twenty five cents per bushel, and many others are anxious to sell at the same figures.—Macon Telegraph.

SINGULAR INCIDENT OF THE SIEGE OF Vicksburg.

—One of the most singular and remarkable instances of random shooting we remember to have heard, occurred during Farragut's run of the blockade. Just as his flag-ship, the Hartford reached the river midway opposite the city, a shell struck one of her guns, which was being loaded, fair in the muzzle, and passing into it, exploded the charge, burst the gun and killed the gunner.

HEADQUARTERS 31st Ala. Regt.

Camp near Cammit River, La.

August, 9th, 1862.

Mr. J. F. Grant—Dear Sir:—You will oblige this Regt., and Alabamians generally by publishing the following list of casualties of the 31st Ala. Regt. commanded by Col. Jephtha Edwards in the battle of Baton Rouge on Tuesday, August 5th 1862.

We were ordered to take up the line of march by Major General Breckenridge, from this place, which is 10 miles from the city of Baton Rouge at 9 o'clock A. M. The intention was to arrive at a suitable point near the city before daylight and make a simultaneous attack on the place at early dawn. Our forces marched along in good order and in perfect silence, until we had arrived in about two miles of the city, when we halted for a short time. The time approaching very near when the attack was to be commenced, while standing in that position to our great misfortune and injury, a small party of Louisiana guerrillas, not being posted in regard to the approach of our force, discovered our front guards and supposing us to be Federals, came rushing up, on their horses and fired on us, our men commenced firing wildly in confusion, frightening a great many horses of officers from the firing of our men—the horses wheeling and dashing along our lines, our men mistaking them as they came dashing along for the Yankee cavalry, continued their fire upon them for 2 or 3 minutes, before the mistake was discovered. When the mistake was discovered and the panic subsided, we found Gen. Helm, our Brigadier General thrown of his horse, and badly hurt in the fall—his Adjutant Gen. shot and mortally wounded. Capt. Roberts then in command of the 4th Ky. Regt. severely wounded, and a considerable number of both officers and soldiers hurt. Immediately after the firing ceased, we heard the long roll sounding on the drums along the Federal lines; we saw at once that the accidental occurrence had exposed our approach and whereabouts to the enemy. Col. Hunt, being the Senior Colonel of our brigade the command devolved upon him. Our whole force was now ordered to move forward by Gen. Breckenridge; we moved forward but a short distance until we commenced forming our line of battle; which was formed speedily through some large sugar plantations, the cane being about as high as a man's shoulder, and densely thick, rendering the movement very tiresome and laborious to the soldiers; but on they went, regardless of the fatigue or danger. As we approached the suburbs of the city we entered open meadow fields, interspersed here and there with houses, high plank fences and small groves, behind which the Federal pickets were posted at different points; but the well directed fire of our skirmishers, as they steadily advanced, drove them like chaff before the wind, until very soon we had commenced entering the streets of the city; then the battle commenced raging most terribly. I will here take occasion to remark that our troops here fought under great disadvantage, the Federals having the advantage in position and far superior in numbers. We entered this fight with less than three thousand men, while the Federals had over five thousand. The enemy were well supplied with artillery and had it so arranged as to rake the streets in almost every direction, but with all their advantage in position and numbers they could not check our fearless and determined soldiers; it was amusing to see our soldiers as they rushed forward, jerking down plank fences, seizing hold of garden posts, jerking down whole sides of a garden at a time, rushing over the vegetation like hungry legions. When we had succeeded in driving them from the streets of the city and commenced entering their encampments near the river, the battle became still more terrific. Our artillery by that time having pretty well advanced through the streets, opened a unanimous fire upon the enemy, while they returned the fire with great fortitude and precision for at least 1 hour. The smoke became so dense that we could not tell the Federal lines from our own, even in some places tell a black man from a white one a distance of fifteen paces. Amidst the clouds of sulphuric smoke that darkened the bright skies over our heads, the blaze from the artillery could be seen in every direction whilst their thunderings rent the earth for miles, while under our feet and all around, could be heard the groans of the wounded and dying, with the continuous roar of musketry made the scene one of awful grandeur, indeed. But with all the odds against us, we succeeded in driving them from their two first encampments rapidly; we then came to the third and largest encampment; here they made the last and most desperate stand, having concentrated their whole force, they fought with great desperation and fortitude; they being posted in such overwhelming numbers and our forces advancing on the encampment rather irregularly were compelled to fall back and reform. At this critical time Col. Hunt, who was in command of our brigade, fell severely wounded in the thigh and hip and had to be carried off the field, when the command of our brigade devolved upon Col. Jephtha Edwards; he reformed the Brigade speedily, but with marked coolness and deliberation. Col. Edwards here won for himself undying fame by the bravery, coolness and deliberation that he exercised in that critical and trying moment. He passed up and down the lines, while the shot and shell was falling around him thick as hail, with a smile on his face, as cool and as much composed as if nothing was going on, charging his men to think what they were doing, to not become excited, to load carefully and aim well. From the instant that Col. Edwards took command of the brigade, our men appeared to be inspired with new vigor and advanced in the best of order; our brigade was formed on the extreme left and opposite the strong position of the encampment. When the order was given to charge, our brigade advanced in perfect order, pouring such a destructive and well-directed fire into their midst, that we soon saw them giving way; we rushed upon them rapidly—loading and firing and firing all the time, and all through the charge, amid the thunder of artillery, the roar of musketry, and frequently enveloped in dense volumes of smoke, we could hear the well known voice of Col. Edwards, lifted high, cheering his men and urging them forward—"Forward! my brave Alabamians forward—a few more well directed fires and the day is ours"—and forward they went, until very soon they had possession of the last encampment and the Yankees drove with great slaughter and in confusion, under the bluffs of the river, to seek shelter under the fire of their gunboats. Col. Edwards had his horse shot under him in the last charge, but was not hurt himself. We then burnt pretty much all the enemy's tents, commissary, quartermaster, and ordinance stores, retired out from the fire of their gunboats in perfect order. Our loss in this brief engagement was 408, in killed and wounded; the Federal loss is estimated at various figures, we know that it is pretty severe, much larger than ours. I will here for the satisfaction of relations and friends generally, give a list of casualties in this regiment.

Company A—Private M. Willis, flesh wound in arm; Co. B. Sargent W. R. Laughlan wounded severely in the thigh; Co. C. Vincent Terry, killed; Sargent Braunfield, seriously wounded in abdomen; J. W. Smith serious in shoulder; Co. E. Watson Mizel flesh wound in arm; Co. F. Isaiah Marton killed; Co. G. Lieut. J. L. Hayes, seriously wounded in leg; Co. H. private W. P. Smith, flesh wound in arm; Co. K. Lieut. H. M. Childers, mortally wounded.

M. C. MAJOR.

Acting Adjutant 31st Ala. Reg't.

CAMP BELTON, near ATHENS TENN.

HEADQUARTERS 2nd ALABAMA CAVALRY.

August 12th, 1862.

Mr. J. F. Grant—Sir—I take this method of announcing myself a candidate for Solicitor for the Circuit composed of the counties of Blount, Marshall, Madison, Jackson, DeKalb, and Cherokee. I do so for two reasons:

First—I am but partially known to the members of the General Assembly of Alabama.

Second—I am here in the C. S. Service and expect to remain until the war is ended, and shall have no opportunity to urge my claims personally before any members of the Legislature.

In reference to my politics, I have ever been a Democrat of the State rights school. I supported and advocated the Hon. J. C. Breckenridge, was run on the Secession ticket in my county for a seat in the Convention which passed the ordinance of Secession and was defeated by the Union candidates, since the war commenced, I have been in the ranks except a short time, during my discharge from service on account of disability.

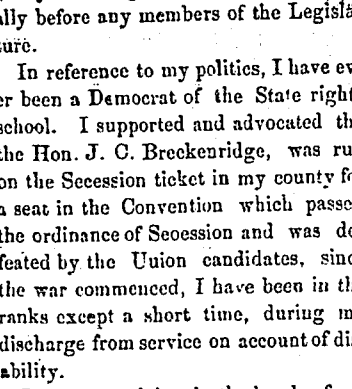

I leave my claims in the hands of my friends and hope that they will do me justice in my absence. I am for fighting Lincoln as long as we can muster a man or furnish a dollar.

Very respectfully,
DAVID L. NICHOLSON.

P. S. As to my qualifications for the office, I refer you to Maj. F. M. Hardwick, Col. Jas. Lumar, and Capt. Lynch, all members of the Legislature.

OBITUARY.
Among the many fallen at the great battle before Richmond, on the 1st day of July, was JAMES W. HUBBARD, son of John Hubbard of Calhoun County, aged 21 years.
Thus in early manhood was he cut down in defending his country, in a great struggle to sustain that precious freedom, once purchased by the blood of our fathers. Bravely and firmly he stood amid the exploding shells and angry bullets that fell in torrents around him, and still fearlessly rushed on to the arms of death, preferring to die in an effort to save his country than live and lose that sacred boon. What a noble and honorable death he has died! A feeling of pride should mingle with the tears that freely fell when we so well remember that he was a brave and good soldier, performing his duties with determination and cheerfulness, ever ready to meet the foe and offer his body a willing sacrifice upon the altar of his country.
To his bereaved mother whose wounded heart is bleeding over the death of her beloved son, as one who knew him well, I must say, let that pride that fills the bosoms of Spartan mothers, glow in your breast, that it was your lot to nurse so excellent a patriot. I would not bid you to cease to weep; nay he is worthy those tears which flow from so pure a fountain. And to the father, who would rather his son should fill a freeman's grave, than live a coward and a slave, he has bequeathed an ever living legacy of honor; while to his sisters and brother he has left a name to be cherished in their memories as a patted relic. True we cannot cease to mourn that one so endeared should thus ruthlessly be torn away in the spring of life. His early departure will make a sable spot in the home circle all through life, and when we would be merry, gloom will depress the brow and sadden the heart at the remembrance that one so dear and beloved is no more. Although no fond mother was near to administer to his dying wants and catch the last whispered words that fell from his quivering lips; no tender sister there to witness the last fading ray of life, nor any kind friend to watch his dying gasp, yet the justice of his cause gave full satisfaction to these privations. Quietly now he reposes in a strange land among the many that fell around him, while his spirit mingles with Heaven's host, where bloodshed and war can never come.
J.
DIED—July 31st, at the 3d Alabama Hospital in Richmond, Virginia, W. T. USAY son of James and Elizabeth Usry, in the 33d year of his age. His death was caused from the effects of a bombshell received at the battle of Gaines' Mill on the 27th of June. He belonged to the 19th Ala. Co. "D." He was born in Spartanburg District South Carolina, where he spent his childhood, those halcyon days that we remember as the brightest and the happiest ever allotted to man. At the early age of 18, he professed religion, and joined the Baptist Church of Bethesda, in 1854, with his father's family he removed to Alabama, and became a member of Oak Bowery Church. His devotion to his church his love for the people of God and his marked piety are sweet assurances that he is now realizing the bliss of Heaven. Sorrow weighs heavily upon the hearts of relatives and friends that one just verging into manhood should be taken from their midst. When he left his quiet home, his farewell to its loved inmates to go to meet the enemy, to stand before their deadly weapons, health glowed upon his cheek late heart that again the son and brother would return and drive away, their sadness, but alas! he is out of the world, and his body lies in the earth, where no kindred hand is near to scatter spring flowers over the sacred mound, but the wild rose will there unfold its petals, and verdure over the soldier's grave. Memory will keep alive his image in the bosom of those he held dear; while the recollection that he was a good soldier, ever at his post, full of patriotism, ready to sacrifice his life for his country, will give him immortality in the breasts of all who knew him.

White Plains, Ala., Aug. 14, 1862.

Heroic Incident in New Orleans.

The Mobile Register says: "We are indebted to high authority for the fact of the following occurrence in New Orleans, intelligence of which reached the city Friday. Mrs. H. M. HARRIS, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of the State, passed on the street a number of Yankee officers sitting in a doorway as she went by. One of them arose and followed her a few steps, and, arresting her progress by placing himself in front of her, told her that she had omitted to bow in passing. She attempted to avoid the ruffian, when he repeated his remarks, and asked her if she had not read Gen. Butler's 'Order No. 28,' with reference to the treatment of Union officers and soldiers with respect. En-deavoring to pass the fellow, he threw his arm around the lady's waist, and pressed his foul lips upon her face. As the villain released her from his embrace, the Southern lady coolly drew a pistol and shot him through the body, so that he fell dead at her feet in the insolent flush of his cowardly triumph over the insulted virtue of a noble and unprotected woman."

Another of the officers immediately arose and approaching the noble and courageous lady took her, by the arm and told her, so that the other Federals could hear, that she must accompany him before Gen. Butler. He immediately placed her in a cab and drove away. She did not to the best's quarters. He directed the cab out of the City and through the line of sentries and further on still, until beyond the reach of the tyrant's outposts. The act of the heroine had made a hero of the witness. He told her that he considered her act justifiable and noble, and that in a moment he had determined that she should not be sacrificed to Butler's vengeance, and adopted the expedient by which she had rescued her. He continued to escort her on her journey through the country until they arrived in the Southern lines at Camp Moore, when he delivered himself up to the Confederate authorities, to be dealt with as a prisoner or otherwise.

So ends this heroic and dramatic incident of the war. Mrs. Hays has set a lofty example for Southern women, and the gallant gentleman who delivered her has shamed its army and the whole North. We trust he has renounced forever the service of the oppressors, and that a rank equivalent to his deserts may reward him in due time.

A dispatch from Gen. Pillow to a friend in Brandon states that Curtis's army have driven off, by force, nearly four hundred negroes belonging to him, killed one of his overseers, and got three others in jail, and literally laid waste his magnificent plantations. He is thus nearly reduced to poverty at one fell swoop of the enemy, for his devotion to Southern rights.

HEAD QUARTERS.

2d CAMP OF INSTRUCTION FOR ALA.

Talladega, Alabama, 7th August '62.

GENERAL ORDERS

No. 1.

1. The undersigned having been assigned to the command of the 2d Camp of Instruction for Alabama assumes the duties thereof from this date.

2. As soon as the quartermaster's, subsistence, and medical departments can be organized, and the requisite supplies obtained, the camp will be opened for the reception of recruits collected from the more northern counties of the State of Alabama, under the "Act to further provide for the Public Defence," commonly known as the "Conscription Act." Meanwhile the enrolling officers will continue to perform the duty of enrollment in obedience to General Orders No. 30 of the War Department and General Orders No. 1, issued by Major Swenson, Commandant of the 1st Camp and senior officer charged with the said Act in the State of Alabama. Recruits however will not be forwarded to this camp, until notice is given that it is open for their reception.

3. The commissioned enrolling officers, detailed for North Alabama, will report immediately to these Head-Quarters, the name of the sub-enrolling officers, appointed by them, for the various counties composing their respective districts.

4. The commanding officer regrets to observe in some quarters a disposition to fling reproach upon the recruits obtained under the operation of the Conscription Act. There is no discredit in being a so-called "Conscript." The laws of our country make no distinction, in respect to merit, privilege, or position, between this and any other class of troops in the service. Many true and loyal men have been kept at home by urgent and imperious domestic reasons, awaiting the action of the government to assume the responsibility for deciding for them between the claims of conflicting duties. The spirit that would brand these men with reproach, if encouraged, would rob the volunteer force of all its merit, by rendering it a moral necessity to escape obloquy.

By order of

Major W. T. WALTHALL.

A. A. G. Commanding 2d Camp of Instruction.
